Why this thumbnail

All the Tactical Genius thumbnails use the same picture (dark aerial battlefield with red/blue unit blocks and white arrows, commander portrait on the right, red brush banner bottom-left). What decides the click is the text: the winners are 1-3 words that make sense with zero context and create tension: the hero's defiance (LET THEM COME, 1.0M views), the enemy's contempt as a real quote ("AMATEURS", 773k) or ominous stakes (AT THE GATES, 585k, 24.7x). The losers are nicknames that need background ("DUGOUT DOUG" 29k, "SEPOY GENERAL" 6k) and lines of 4+ words.

Our main thumbnail uses the winning type 1, the hero's defiance: NOT RETREATING, from Smith's "We are not retreating..." line (no quote marks because it is shortened). The portrait is a generic 1950 US Marine general (parka, cap, binoculars), not a likeness of a real person.

Alternative thumbnail (use it for YouTube's thumbnail A/B test)

Alternative: SURROUNDED (type 3, ominous stakes) for the A/B test. AI slips: on SURROUNDED the AI misspelled the reservoir label as "CHGSIN"; this was fixed by hand and it now reads CHOSIN RESERVOIR. On NOT RETREATING the red blocks form a thin dotted ridge line rather than many, and some trucks and prop planes appear (era-appropriate). Labels are correct.

Before uploading: check the thumbnail at small size on a phone. The banner text must be readable at 20% size.

3. Description (copy and paste)

Everything below is ready to paste into the YouTube description box (the first line is the title). The credit lines are required by the image, music and sound-effect licences: do not remove them.

How 15,000 Marines Broke Out of a 120,000-Man Chinese Trap | O.P. Smith's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves

November 1950. Fifteen thousand Marines, a hundred and twenty thousand Chinese, thirty degrees below zero. At the Chosin Reservoir.

Which commander should I cover next? Let me know in the comments.

Upload checklist

- Play the 1080p master through once (sound, sync, no black frames).
- Upload the master (not the 540p preview parts).
- Paste title, description and tags; upload the thumbnail (1280x720).
- Tick 'altered or synthetic content'.
- Add end screen and cards; set visibility and schedule.
- After 24-48 h: check click-through rate and 30-second retention in YouTube Studio; if CTR is under 4%, swap to the alternative thumbnail.

Facts to double-check before publishing:

- Chosin casualty figures (check Montross & Canzona, vol. III).
- Almond's helicopter flight.
- The "12 divisions" figure.
- The 27 Nov 1950 front positions on the maps are approximate.
