2. Title and thumbnail

Title (locked, vidIQ score 93)

Rokossovsky's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Destroyed Hitler's Strongest Army

Alternatives (vidIQ scores):

- Rokossovsky's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Broke Army Group Centre (89)
- Rokossovsky's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The General Better Than Zhukov (87)

Why this thumbnail

Alternative for YouTube's Test & compare: TWO BLOWS (type 1, his decision against Stalin).

Checked: Bobruisk and Parichi labels (the AI image's own labels were removed: it had Parichi in the wrong place), swamp, log road and birch forest match Belarus 1944. The portrait is Rokossovsky's real 1945 photo (public domain), not an AI likeness; it shows him as a Marshal (he was made Marshal on 29 June 1944, during the battle).

Before uploading: check the thumbnail at small size on a phone.

3. Description (copy and paste)

The first line is the title. Everything after it is the description: ready to paste, with NO links (channel rule). Keep the credit lines: the music, sound, archive and image licences require them.

Rokossovsky's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Destroyed Hitler's Strongest Army

About one in four people in Belarus would not survive the German occupation. In June 1944, the Red Army came to drive the occupiers out, and in a single summer Army Group Centre lost around 400,000 men. It began in swamps the Germans were sure no army could cross.

Konstantin Rokossovsky went from a Soviet prison cell to three of the greatest battles of the Second World War. In this video we break down his three greatest tactical moves: the elastic defence of the Volokolamsk highway before Moscow in 1941, the defence of the northern face of the Kursk salient at Ponyri and Olkhovatka in 1943, and the two-pronged breakthrough at Bobruisk during Operation Bagration in 1944.

Bend, don't break. Read the blow before it lands. Strike where the map says you can't.

Which commander should we cover next? Let us know in the comments.

Upload checklist

- Play the 1080p master through once (sound, sync, no black frames).
- Upload the master.
- Paste title, description and tags; upload the thumbnail (1280x720).
- Fill in the business email in the description.
- Tick 'altered or synthetic content'.
- Add end screen and cards; set visibility and schedule.
- After 24-48 h: check click-through rate and 30-second retention; if CTR is under 2% after ~1,000 impressions, switch to the alternative thumbnail.

Facts to double-check before publishing (single source, memoir-based or approximate; see research/FACT_NOTES.md):
• The Istra-reservoir episode (Zhukov refused, Shaposhnikov approved, Zhukov cancelled) and the "two blows" meeting with Stalin both come from Rokossovsky's own memoirs; Zhukov disputed them (the script says so).
• Torture details: from the family's account (teeth, ribs, two mock executions), worded as such.
• Kryukovo / Istra retaken ~8 / ~11 December 1941 (map labels).
• German 9th Army losses at Kursk shown as ~20,000-23,000 (Frieser / Zetterling range).
• Bobruisk pocket ~50,000 killed and ~20,000 captured (Wikipedia, Bobruysk offensive); no reliable Soviet figure, shown as a dash.
• ~400,000 German losses = whole Operation Bagration (Frieser 399,102), stated as such.
• All front lines are approximate (logged per date in research/FACT_NOTES_*.md).
