Thumbnail banner texts (from the Tactical Genius results)

A: “MAKE GEORGIA HOWL”: his own words (telegram to Grant, 9 Oct 1864): defiance + menace, 3 words, no context needed (TG winners LET THEM COME 986k, “AMATEURS” 752k). B: CUT LOOSE: the decision of the video in plain words. Reserve: “INSANE” (the 1861 headline; insults about the general flopped twice on TG). Details: youtube/thumbnail_texts.md.

Both thumbnails were generated by vidIQ in one go (owner rule 2026-10-26), with 3 Tactical Genius thumbnails as references; each scores 92 on vidIQ. The battlefield is the hook (Union columns swinging round a burning Atlanta onto the railroad, rails twisted). The portrait is an AI-generated Civil War general in colour, not a photograph of Sherman: no battle flags, no modern vehicles (checked).

3. Description (copy and paste)

The first line is the title. Everything after it is the description: ready to paste, with NO links (channel rule). Keep the credit lines: the music, sound and image licences require them.

William T. Sherman's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Broke the Confederacy

In August 1864, Abraham Lincoln expected to lose the election, and the Union with it. Everything hung on Atlanta. Nearly a hundred thousand Union soldiers, and one general who would break the Confederacy within a year.

In this video we break down William Tecumseh Sherman's three greatest tactical moves: the Atlanta campaign of 1864, where he outflanked Joseph Johnston ridge after ridge and finally swung his army around Atlanta onto its last railroad at Jonesboro; the March to the Sea, where two wings threatened Macon and Augusta at once and the army crossed Georgia with no supply line to Savannah and Fort McAllister; and the Carolinas campaign of 1865, through flooded swamps on corduroy roads, past Columbia and Charleston to Bentonville and the surrender at Bennett Place. We also cover his mistake at Kennesaw Mountain, and the cost of "hard war" for the people of Georgia and the Carolinas.

Hit the railroad, not the wall. Threaten two places at once. Go where they say no army can.

Which was his greatest move: 1, 2 or 3? Tell us in the comments, and tell us which commander we should cover next.

Upload checklist

- Play the 1080p master through once (sound, sync, no black frames).
- Upload the master.
- Paste title, description and tags; upload thumbnail A (1280x720).
- Fill in the business email in the description.
- Tick 'altered or synthetic content'.
- Add end screen (one related video + subscribe) and cards; set visibility and schedule.
- After 24-48 h: check click-through rate and 30-second retention; if CTR is under 2% after ~1,000 impressions, switch to the alternative thumbnail.

Facts to double-check before publishing (approximate, single-source or second-hand; see research/FACT_NOTES*.md):
• Atlanta campaign casualties: Union 31,687 (Memoirs) vs 37,081 (Sherman's own OR table) vs ~34,500 (ABT); Confederate ~35,000. Card shows the range.
• Griswoldville Confederate losses 523 (Scaife & Bragg) vs 1,100 (ABT); Fort McAllister Union losses 92-134.
• 'No such army since the days of Julius Caesar': attributed to Johnston (book title/preface), no primary text found; said as 'is credited with saying'.
• 'War is all hell': reported from his 1880 Columbus, Ohio speech to veterans (not 1879, not wartime).
• Sent home on leave in late 1861 (Halleck); Louisiana resignation Jan 1861; Shiloh hand wound; Chattahoochee crossing 8-9 Jul; Johnston relieved 17/18 Jul; Johnston restored 22-23 Feb 1865; Raleigh 13 Apr.
• Griswoldville and Rivers' Bridge are drawn schematically (enlarged); all front lines, control areas and march routes are approximate (research/FACT_NOTES_*.md).
