Thumbnail banner texts

A: AT ALL HAZARDS: the words of Bragg's order to Cleburne at Ringgold Gap (stakes, 3 words, no context needed; TG type 3). B: HOLD THE GAP: his decision in plain words (TG type 1). Studio Test & compare can run both.

Both thumbnails were generated by vidIQ in one go (owner rule 2026-10-26), with 3 Tactical Genius thumbnails as references; A scores 92 and B 95 on vidIQ. The battlefield is the hook (Union columns marching on Ringgold Gap, hidden Confederate units on the ridge walls, fire in the gap). The portrait is an AI-generated Civil War general in colour, not a photograph of Cleburne. The AI's garbled map labels were repainted by hand (tools/make_thumb_labels.py); no battle flags.

3. Description (copy and paste)

The first line is the title. Everything after it is the description: ready to paste, with NO links (channel rule). Keep the credit lines: the music, sound and image licences require them.

Patrick Cleburne's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Saved the Confederacy's Western Army

In November 1863, the Confederacy's western army was running for its life. Its last hope was a mountain gap called Ringgold. Four thousand men held it against three times their number, and saved the army.

In this video we break down Patrick Cleburne's three greatest tactical moves: Tunnel Hill at Missionary Ridge on 25 November 1863, where one division on the high ground broke Sherman's attacks one brigade at a time and counterattacked; the rear guard at Ringgold Gap two days later, with two guns hidden behind cut brush and a reserve that outran the Union flankers up Taylor's Ridge; and Pickett's Mill on 27 May 1864, where a Union flank march walked into a steep ravine. We also cover his Dalton memorandum of January 1864, which proposed freeing and arming enslaved men to save the Confederacy, and what it cost him.

Let them tire on the hill, then strike. Hide your strength until they are close. Let the ground do the killing.

Which was his greatest move: 1, 2 or 3? Tell us in the comments, and tell us which commander we should cover next.

Upload checklist

- Play the 1080p master through once (sound, sync, no black frames).
- Upload the master.
- Paste title, description and tags; upload thumbnail A (1280x720).
- Fill in the business email in the description.
- Tick 'altered or synthetic content'.
- Add end screen (one related video + subscribe) and cards; set visibility and schedule.
- After 24-48 h: check click-through rate and 30-second retention; if CTR is under 2% after ~1,000 impressions, switch to the alternative thumbnail.

Facts to double-check before publishing (research/FACT_NOTES.md; the Official Records and the Symonds/Cozzens/Castel books were not reachable, so these rest on secondary sources):
• Union strength at Ringgold Gap is hedged (“more than ten thousand”; sources say 12,000-16,000); Cleburne ~4,000 (OR figure 4,157 not confirmed).
• Tunnel Hill: Sherman ~16,000 in three divisions (the research's 25,000 was wrong); Union loss “almost 2,000”; Cleburne “a little over 200” (222 in the report: confirm). Brigade names Cumming and Brown (Hardee's reinforcements) are from memory.
• Ringgold Gap: Cleburne 20 killed, 190 wounded, 11 missing; Union “about 500” (509 in Wikipedia; Hooker's own return varies). Creighton and Crane killed: Geary's report to confirm.
• Bragg's resignation within days of Ringgold; Helena druggist/lawyer; Hooker's column delayed by a burned bridge: from memory.
• Pickett's Mill: Wood's division 1,457 and about 1,600 in all; Cleburne about 450 (his report). The positions in the ravine are approximate (no battle map could be downloaded). Matthies was WOUNDED (head), not killed: fixed in the script.
• Dalton memorandum, 2 Jan 1864: only the verified half of the 'loss of independence' line is quoted; Davis ordered it suppressed. Not used because unsourced: 'Follow me, boys', Lee's 'meteor' quote, 'Dead Angle' at Pickett's Mill, 8 flags/500 prisoners, rolled shells.

• Bierce's only available photo is post-war (captioned 'later in life'); Granbury and Walker have initials badges (no public-domain photo).
