2. Title and thumbnail

Title (Tactical Genius pattern: name first, series name, subtitle; vidIQ score 89)

James Gavin's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Stopped the Tigers

Alternatives (vidIQ scores):

- James Gavin's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Jumped First (90)
- James Gavin's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The General Who Jumped First (89)

Why this thumbnail

Alternative for YouTube's Test & compare: TIGERS INCOMING (type 3, ominous stakes).

Checked: Biazza Ridge and Ponte Dirillo labels, Tiger tanks (correct: a Tiger company of the Hermann Göring Division was there), blue paratrooper blocks on the ridge, red German blocks below. The portrait is Gavin's real US Army photo (public domain), not an AI likeness. Note: the photo shows him later as a major general (two stars); at Biazza Ridge he was a colonel.

Before uploading: check the thumbnail at small size on a phone.

3. Description (copy and paste)

The first line is the title. Everything after it is the description: ready to paste, with NO links (channel rule). Keep the credit lines: the music, sound and image licences require them.

James Gavin's Top 3 Legendary Tactical Moves | The Man Who Stopped the Tigers

Twenty-six canvas boats. Two hundred and sixty men. A river three hundred metres wide, in broad daylight, with German guns waiting on the far bank. The general who sent them had done this kind of thing before.

In this video we break down James Gavin's three greatest tactical moves: the stand on Biazza Ridge against Tiger tanks in Sicily (1943), the charge across the La Fière causeway in Normandy (1944), and the Waal River crossing at Nijmegen during Operation Market Garden (1944).

Lead from the front. Take the ground that decides the battle. Attack where the enemy is sure you cannot.

Which commander should we cover next? Tell us in the comments.

Upload checklist

- Play the 1080p master through once (sound, sync, no black frames).
- Upload the master.
- Paste title, description and tags; upload the thumbnail (1280x720).
- Fill in the business email in the description.
- Tick 'altered or synthetic content'.
- Add end screen and cards; set visibility and schedule.
- After 24-48 h: check click-through rate and 30-second retention; if CTR is under 4%, switch to the alternative thumbnail.

Facts to double-check before publishing (single secondary source or disputed; see research/FACT_NOTES.md):
• "No other American general made four combat jumps" (Wikipedia wording).
• Julian Cook praying "Hail Mary, full of grace" while paddling (Ryan / secondary sources).
• "None of the paratroopers had ever used one" (the canvas boats).
• Biazza Ridge casualties: Gavin's own count (about 50 dead, 100+ wounded); the Ponte Dirillo memorial lists 39 names.
• Waal crossing wounded: shown as 100+ (sources give ~100 to 151).
• Map positions (Biazza Ridge crest, the La Fière flood edge, the crossing point) are approximate, read from terrain.
